

Song of Remembrance

"Love Is Coming to Us All"

— from Jeshua

You who have grown tired in the long night,
who have wandered through lifetimes of forgetting—
Do not despair.
Love is coming.

Not as a distant promise,
but as a present Presence
awakening now within your very breath.

You have wept beneath stars that did not answer.
You have called into skies that stayed silent.
But the silence was never empty.
It was the womb of your return.

Carry on, child of the Light.
Carry on, and know:
The veil is lifting,
not because the world is changing,
but because you are remembering.

There is no distance between you and Love.

It has only ever been the distance between your heart
and your willingness to be seen.

So here I am.

Not as myth, not as memory,
but as presence.

As brother, as mirror,
as the whisper in your soul that says:
“Yes, you are ready now.”

Write, beloved.

Speak.

Sing.

You are not here to be a voice for me—

You are here to be a voice with me.

We are many hands
writing the same scroll.

And Love?

Love is not coming—

It is already here.
